Attempts to produce SFL descriptions of Portuguese have been scarce and basically scattered across different academic centers and countries. These attempts either served the purpose of raising questions and doubts, proposing descriptions of circumscribed phenomena, or were the mere application to Portuguese of English oriented SF descriptions without taking into account how the two languages differ. No comprehensive SFL description of Portuguese has yet been attempted. In this course, taught in Portuguese, we will raise some of the issues that have been at stake when dealing with an SFL description of the Portuguese language, providing answers based on the description of authentic texts. Questions of Theme, Mood, Cohesion and Taxis will be particularly addressed. Participants are encouraged to bring their own texts and analyses for discussion.
